

	The body is washed and purified so that it is clean as it enters the afterlife.
	The liver, lungs, stomach and intestine are removed and put into canopic jars. The heart is not removed because it is the pharaoh's soul.
	A hook is inserted through the nose and wiggled around to turn the brain into a liquid, which can be drained.
	The body is covered in natron, a type of salt, and left for 40 days to dry out so that it doesn't decay.
	The body is stuffed with linen and rubbed with sweet smelling oils. False eyes, a wig and make up is applied to the body.
	The body is wrapped in linen and amulets are added to protect the body.
	The mummy is placed with a copy of the book of the dead and a cartouche inside a series of coffins and finally into a stone sarcophagus
